NEWS FROM EREWHON

1. The poet blamed gravity, windows, and cement for his humiliating laceration during the train strike, not the blaze of enlivening rum from the cabinet.
2. Tendrils of cornflowers in her pony tail did not refute the pink slip from the Center, smoothing her like a Sherman Tank stuck in earth.
3. The opposite attorney rhetorically denied preconceptions when the jittery senator was hospitalized after an on-camera collapse in the park.
4. Backlash in the pastures: the blistered ghost's invocation of the mock rarebit flattening in the foliage at midnight in the cream colored bungalow's mirror scared onlookers.
5. World forensic chamber, weighing forsaken burnt terrain, promises pollen for sleepy ants.
6. Millenium news: gracious Lazarus trafficked agricultural milk laxatives concealed in fire-red pattycakes.
7. Alice risked church animosity by questioning a dog on tv with a cocktail on an emerald-outlined army blanket in the sun.
8. People in the street are dying, gelatinous, diced by hatchets, while helmet-endowed George Washington humps, then performs vatican ablutions.
